“Internal or Transnational? Zapotec Women’s Migration Dilemmas”

IVÁN SANDOVAL CERVANTES

Wednesday, April 22, 2015 / Free & Open to the Public
Hendricks Hall 330 / 1408 University St. / UO campus

For women of the Zapotec community of Santa Ana Zegache, discussing migration presents gender specific dilemmas. In this presentation, Iván Sandoval Cervantes provides an historical analysis of the different migration movements in which women from Santa Ana Zegache have participated: Zegacheñas have migrated to Mexico City, to the United States, and to Oaxaca City. He also explores how the constraints that women face before, during, and after migrating are different from those faced by men.

Iván Sandoval Cervantes, a PhD candidate in the UO Department of Anthropology, is the 2015-16 CSWS Jane Grant Fellowship Award recipient.
