“An Army of Some: Recruiting for Difference and Diversity in the U.S. Armed Forces”

JEREMIAH FAVARA

Wednesday, December 2, 2015 ▪ Noon – 1 p.m.
Jane Grant Conference Rm ▪ Hendricks Hall 330
1408 University St. ▪ Free & Open to the Public

Jeremiah Favara is a graduate teaching fellow in the Department of Women’s and Gender Studies and a doctoral candidate in the School of Journalism and Communication at the University of Oregon. His research interests focus on the ways gender, sexuality, race, class, and other identity markers relate to media representations and production. Studying media representations, technologies, and their circulation in intersectional structures of power, his research is committed to exploring the role of media in influencing lived experiences. Favara received a 2015 CSWS Graduate Student Research Award in support of this research.
